The RoutledgeCurzon Political Economy of the Middle East and North Africa Series

Edited by Hassan Hakimian, City University, London

The Middle East continues to dominate in the news and current affairs coverage of the media both in global and regional contexts. Despite this growing and intensified interest in recent years, it is widely recognised that the region is largely underrepresented in a range of disciplines in the scholarly and academic domains.

RoutledgeCurzon are proud to announce the launch of this new series to widen in-depth analyses and understanding of the economic and political dynamics of this important region. The aim of the series is to publish both specialist and more general titles covering a wide range of issues relating to the political economy of the Middle East and North Africa region. It will feature the latest political economy studies of the Middle East defined to encompass countries from Morocco to Iran.

Submissions from prospective authors are welcomed, and should be sent in the first instance to the series editor (H.Hakiminian@city.ac.uk). The series will be open to single-authored books as well as edited volumes and textbooks. All manuscripts will be subject to international standards of peer review.

Series editor: Hassan Hakimian, Senior Lecturer in Economics at Cass Business School, City University, London.
